Dams not feasible for area creeks

Dams to stem infrequent flooding of the two creeks which bound Canyon to the north and south will not be constructed on the creeks, if federal officials heed a report prepared by the USDA Soil Conservation Service.

The report, the result of a multi-day field examination by a team of four specialists from the SCS last spring, was made public last week by John O'Conner, district conservationist with the SCS in Canyon.

O'Conner says flatly the dams will not be built due to the report's conclusion, which states that the dam construction would be far too costly when compared to the benefits which would accrue to the city.

"It's not even close," O'Conner said referring to the report's analysis of cost-benefit ratio.

The SCS report, which was sought by the City of Canyon, Randall County and the Palo Duro Soil and Water Conservation District, follows by two years a report from the Army Corps of Engineers that indicated flood damage could be an infrequent hazard for urban developments near Palo Duro and Tierra Blanca Creeks.

Palo Duro Creek runs east to west through the Hunsley Hills addition in north Canyon and Tierra Blanca Creek runs east to west just south of Canyon.

The SCS report, compiled after an SCS civil engineer, hydrologist, economist and geologist visited here last spring, cites monetary losses which could be expected due to flooding of the two creeks in terms of cattle, agricultural products and urban developments.

It compares those losses with the costs expected to construct dams on the creeks and comes up with a cost-benefit ratio.

The report cites the need for four dams — one on the Tierra Blanca Creek just outside of Canyon, and three on the Palo Duro Creek at various points.

"It is estimated that a flood having an average frequency of occurrence on the order of once in 100 years would result in about $69,000 in urban flood damages in the undeveloped areas," the report says in its analysis of flood control structures for Tierra Blanca Creek.

Estimated average annual loss due to flood damages would thus be about $9340, according to the report.

The report states that cost of one dam on the creek would be $177,710 and when pro-rated the annual cost would be $10,020.

The dam would reduce the damages to the urban developments by about $700 per year.

Thus, when the report compares the $700 benefit per year with the $10,000 cost per year, it concludes that a dam construction is not feasible.

Likewise, on the Palo Duro Creek, the report states that a so-called "100-year flood" would result in about $110,000 in urban development damages.

A flood control structure would reduce the damages to about an average of about $800 per year so the benefits per year would total about $7120.

However, costs of the three dams on the Palo Duro would be about $990,000 which when prorated through a number of years averages to $55,000 per year, again not a feasible cost-benefit ratio.

O'Conner said the report, rather than being negative, has a very positive aspect.

"Really this is good," he said. "We won't suffer a whole lot of damage like they do in some areas from flooding."

The report actually confirms that the chances of major flooding and the resulting heavy damage to homes and businesses are slim.

"We're in good shape," he said, "a lot better than other communities are. We don't have the flood problems other communities have."

Randall County, the City of Canyon and the soil and water conservation district sought the SCS field examination not long after the Army Corps of Engineers finished and presented a report on the flood possibilities of the two creeks to local officials.

The Army study indicated that a flood of great proportions, one which they estimate might hit once every 100 years, would leave a great deal of the Hunsley Hills addition under water. It noted, however, that not a large amount of developed area is in the flood plain the study outlined.

Terry Kimbrough of Tulsa, who presented the Army study here in 1971, told The News at that time that Buffalo Lake posed the major threat to flood control in relationship to Canyon.

He said the dam at the lake is in poor condition and the amount of water the lake can hold is limited by build-up of sediment.

"A really big flood would wash the dam out and create devastation below it," he said.

O'Conner said the SCS study relied to an extent on the Corps of Engineers study and that the SCS examiners took into consideration the potential danger of the Buffalo Lake dam.

The Army study suggested that city commissioners take steps to restrict housing development near Tierra Blanca Creek, primarily through zoning. They noted that the danger area in Hunsley Hills is the area now taken up by the golf course there.

In the SCS analysis, the examiners said 3600 acres of land are subject to flooding from the Tierra Blanca Creek.

Major floods which inundate more than one-half of the flood plain occur about every 10 years, the report says. Major flooding

Ruth Mason of Amarillo tries to outfit Patty Snider of Canyon, number 15, in a West Texas State University Buffalo uniform in preparation for a clinic to be sponsored by the Buff coaching staff for football widows in the not-too-distant future on the campus.

Football widows clinic set Sunday at university

West Texas State University's football coaching staff will attempt for the second time to ease that tension which occurs between men and women during the long months of a football season.

The second annual Ladies' Football Clinic will be in the school's Activities Center at 2 p.m., Sunday, Aug. 12.

The clinic is basically set up to explain the game in simple and light terms to those women who become "football widows" for much of each year.

The average weekend for an avid football fan starts Friday evening with a high school football game. That weekend continues at a rapid clip through an afternoon or evening of college football on Saturday and doesn't end until the last tackle has been made during the Monday night professional football game on television.

It is for those women who are either left at home while their husbands or boy friends attend games in person, or sit in the corner reading during the long hours of television games that the West Texas State coaches set up the clinic. The three-hour session is free of charge and any football fans are invited to attend.

"We set the clinic up for women, but men are certainly more than welcome to attend," said WTSU head football coach and athletic director Gene Mayfield.

Last year's clinic drew 200 women and a few husbands. It was apparent that the men attending the session got as much good from the instruction as their wives.

The 1972 clinic moved at a rapid pace and on a "light vein" from the opening remarks by coach Mayfield to its closing question and answer session.

Mayfield and his staff used demonstrations and visual aids during last year's clinic.

Offensive and defensive formations and plays were shown to the women and they were the same plays they see either while attending football games or watching games on television.

Such items as rules, uniform and strategy will be discussed and demonstrated by the Buffalo coaches. As was done in the 1972 clinic, members of the coaching staff will act out skits on various football terms and allow the women to name the skits.

2 events honor new WTSU pres.

Two special events honoring Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd I. Watkins will be held this month on the West Texas State University campus.

A public reception for the new president of WTSU and his wife will be from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday in the activities center ballroom on campus.

The reception will be hosted by the university Board of Regents and Chancellor Dr. James P. Cornette.

Dr. Cornette said the reception will be the first formal presentation of Dr. and Mrs. Watkins to the people of the Panhandle.

"The public is most cordially invited to come and meet Dr. and Mrs. Watkins on this occasion," he said.

Canyon residents in particular are similarly invited to a noon luncheon honoring the new president and his wife on Aug. 20 in the university cafeteria.

The luncheon will be hosted by the Canyon Chamber of Commerce, according to Manager Roland Black.

Black said further information on the luncheon will be announced at a later date.

Saturday's reception will follow a meeting on the Canyon campus of the university's regents.

Dr. Watkins has been on the campus since early last week although his official day to take office was Wednesday.

Discrimination suit filed, could impact on local

A civil suit which could have impact on local residents who are members of a retirement system is expected to be filed this month in Austin.

The Central Texas Chapter of the Texas Civil Liberties Union will file suit this month against the state, particularly challenging the state law which gives retired male employees larger state pensions than retired female employees.

One local woman has filed a complaint with the Office of Civil Rights alleging that the Texas Municipal Retirement System, not related to the state retirement system, discriminates on the basis of sex in providing larger benefits for retired males than are provided for retired females.

Mrs. Marguerite Strain, employee of the City of Canyon for 28 years, filed the complaint last year and city officials are awaiting a ruling from the Washington office of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission before taking action in Mrs. Strain's case.

Mrs. Marjorie Hershey, chairman of the Central Texas Chapter of the TCLU, said she believes the suit to be filed against the state will have a direct relationship to the Texas Municipal Retirement System.

"This will be a landmark case," she predicted last week.

Dean Gorham, director of the TMRS, told City Manager George Loudder in a letter last week that he has invited the EEOC to sue the system to determine whether it does, in fact, discriminate against women.

Mrs. Hershey said she believes the decision reached in the TCLU case against the state would apply directly to the TMRS as well.

"I don't think they'd have to

VOL. 4 NO. 48 | SUNDAY, AUGUST 5, 1973 | 8 PAGES 1 SECTION | 15 CENTS

Happy to fete Aug. 16, 17, 18

Happy's Jaycees are already gearing up for this year's Happy Days Celebration, an event which last year drew more than a thousand persons to the town.

Three days of events are mapped out for this year's festivities — Aug. 16, 17 and 18.

Primary activities on Aug. 16 and 17 will be an amateur rodeo open to all comers and to be staged at 8 p.m. nightly at the Happy rodeo arena.

But, Happy's sponsoring Jaycees will spend all night the 17th carefully cooking seven beeves for a gigantic barbecue Aug. 18.

The rodeo will continue Aug. 18. Dances will follow each rodeo performance at the Jaycee Hall.

Aug. 18, a Saturday, will be the big day for the celebration as old-timers come to town, former residents stop by and area fun-lovers flock to the town to see a parade and bite into some barbecue.

The parade, with entries expected from throughout the region, begins at 9:30 a.m. Aug. 18 and will travel down Happy's main street.

Old-timers, classified as persons 65 years of age and over, will get first serving at the barbecue with their lunch served at 11:30 a.m. at Stephenson Park.

The barbecue will be served the public starting at noon and those who attend will be able to eat barbecue beef, beans and all the trimmings plus iced tea for $1 per plate.

The barbecue for the old-timers will be free.

The Jaycees will set up many games at the park for visiting youngsters and cash prizes will be awarded.

In addition, there'll be a beard-

Tax break for elderly due views

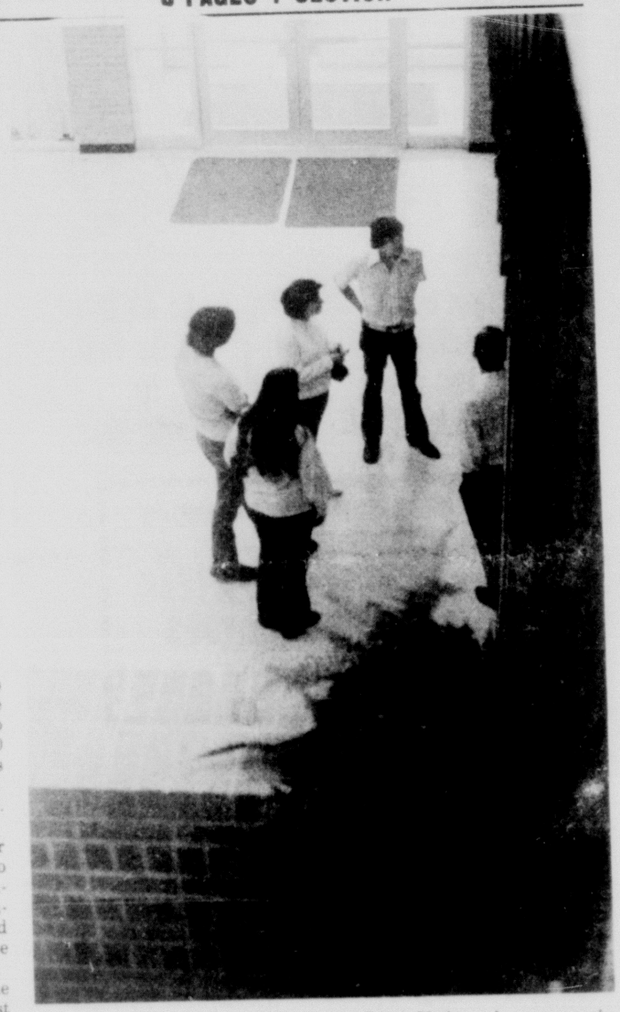

Canyon city commissioners are expected to consider and give initial approval Monday night to an ordinance granting a $3000 exemption to residents 65 years of age and older on homesteads.

Commissioners meet at 7 p.m. in the community center.

City Manager George Loudder was instructed last month to prepare the ordinance for commission consideration and commissioners at that time indicated they view the ordinance favorably.

If the ordinance is passed, the city will become the first governmental entity in Randall County to grant the $3000 ad valorem tax exemption since the exemption was approved by

Wheat crop worth $12 million

The 1973 wheat crop harvested recently in Randall County has apparently surpassed all previous wheat crops in bushels and dollar value. And, it has surpassed earlier predictions about its value.

"Unofficial estimates indicate that the value of the 1973 wheat crop could exceed $12 million," County Agent John Brazzil said.

Brazzil had previously speculated that the value might be close to $10 million.

"Not since the late 1940s have good crops, large harvested acreages and strong prices been combined as they were in 1973," Brazzil said.

Spurred by expanding sales of grain to foreign countries, President Nixon last year announced a farm program which included an option for farmers to take no set-aside on feed grain acreages. As a result, many local farmers planted expanded acres of wheat last winter for summer harvest.

The weather played a prime role in the value of the summer's wheat crop as moisture was plentiful throughout the winter and spring months and hail damage was only minimal.

Prices for wheat remained strong throughout the summer.

Brazzil compared the 1973 crop to the crop in 1949.

"In 1949, a banner year for wheat in Randall County, the Randall County production of 3.5 million bushels had a market value of $6.3 million," he said.

He estimated the 1973 crop from about 160,000 acres of irrigated and dryland farmland yielded an average of 35 bushels per acre.

Market price for wheat this summer averaged around $2.50 per bushel with a range between $2.35 and $3. The

Locals eye fed. bill on US 60

Local, regional and even New Mexico officials are watching every move Congress makes this summer and fall in putting together a federal highway funding bill which they hope will provide for money to start procedures to change U.S. 60 to an interstate highway.

It's been six months since representatives from Canyon traveled to Roswell, N.M., to meet with officials including U.S. Sen. Joseph Montoya concerning the project.

And throughout those six months, local officials have heard virtually nothing more about the status of the redesignation plan.

A year ago officials from several New Mexico cities which are on U.S. 60 called a meeting of Texas cities on U.S. 60 in Hereford to outline their plans to have the highway redesignated a part of the interstate system.

The meeting in Roswell climaxed local and regional ac-

Our World

Why Watergate Mess?

By ANN BROWN

Crooked politicians are as old as government. It was dirty politics that forced the first American settlers out of their homes and into the New World. Why then the unprecedented spectacle of Watergate?

Political enemies have used bugging devices to spy on each other since the invention of electronic listening equipment.

Moscow has constantly bugged our embassies.

The democrats kept Barry Goldwater under such complete surveillance during the 1964 presidential campaign that he reportedly said "Good morning, Lyndon" every day when he got out of bed.

Why shame our country before the whole world by washing our dirty national linen in public?

Anyone who doubts publication of this scandal is giving aid and comfort to our enemies should read the communist newspapers.

It should be apparent to everyone by now that the Watergate hearing is the most expensive diversion Americans have ever experienced.

The $ millions that the trials cost is not the issue.

Nor is it the millions lost to television sponsors by the usurping of their time.

It is not the time wasted by our senators whose $42,000 salaries are but a mere tip of the iceberg of their cost to the nation.

It is not even the worldwide humiliation and loss of prestige of our nation and our currency.

Nor is it the $ million plus that the President spent on his houses while no one was looking.

First of all the weary taxpayer's eyes were diverted from the wild government spending that is bankrupting the nation caught between confiscatory taxation and skyrocketing living costs.

The real cost to America is the chicanery promoted on Capitol Hill while the people are absorbed in Watergate.

Perhaps the most immediate loss is inflation and the sabotaging of the food and fuel industries. This will likely cost and inconvenience every American, and it cannot be cured overnight.

However, the food, fuel, and financial situation can eventually be worked out without causing permanent damage to the nation.

But the Seabed Treaty is something else.

The United Nations is attempting this power-grab that will give the U.N. and the "emerging nations," who dictate the decisions in the General Assembly, economic control over the largest deposits of strategic minerals in the world.

And there is more.

Since 1948 the enemies of freedom have been trying to sneak the innocent-sounding Genocide Convention into the laws of our land. This treaty which would nullify our own Constitution has been rejected numerous times. But while the opposing senators are involved in Watergate, our foes are trying again.

The Soviet Union insisted on omitting "political genocide" when the convention was formulated. Therefore, the very crime the treaty was supposed to prevent is not punishable under the definitions of the treaty.

Senator Sam Ervin said of the Genocide Convention, "American soldiers fighting under the flag of their country in foreign lands (are) triable and punishable in foreign courts — even in the courts of our warring enemy — for killing or seriously wounding members of our warring enemy."

But where is the good senator while this serpent is rearing its ugly head again in the Senate?

In 1951, Richard Nixon said, "The major objection to the treaty is that its provisions would not apply to the persecutions of minorities in the Soviet Union." Yet on Feb. 19, 1970, the President asked the Senate to ratify the Genocide Convention.

This about face of Nixon is a far greater betrayal of our Country, and a more legitimate cause to impeach him than any involvement in Watergate.

How long will Americans — especially our senators — be duped by this dangerous diversion instead of getting on with the business of promoting the welfare of our nation?

Advice Of My Own

By CARROLL WILSON

Would it seem immodest of me to say my new little daughter is just about the prettiest baby I've ever seen, rivaled only by her big sister.

My wife awoke about 5 a.m. Wednesday certain that the long-awaited time had come to go to the hospital.

Understandably excited, she dialed the phone number of her sister, Misty, who lives in Amarillo to break the good news.

"Hello," answered the groggy voice at the other end of the line.

"Misty," my wife virtually shouted into the phone, "I'm going into labor and we're getting ready to go to the hospital."

"Congratulations," came the still sleepy reply, "but, who's Misty?"

"Isn't this the Wilson residence," my wife asked realizing the earliness of the hour.

"No, it's not," said the now-awake woman, "but good luck anyway."

The Texas Municipal Retirement System, which adamantly refuses to change its retirement benefit system to pay men and women retirees equally, could well afford to pay those equal benefits.

Total assets of the system in 1972 were $106.3 million.

More than 34,000 employees from 248 cities in Texas are paying monthly into the system for retirement.

The system currently pays out to only 2,163 retirees.

In 1972, the system paid benefits to retirees totalling $2.2 million and paid $3.5 million to members who withdrew from the system.

Anyway you cut it, there's a whopping amount of cash there which is only tentatively encumbered.

Director Dean Gorham must be an irascible old boy. He writes a letter with his jaw jutted and his fists up.

I don't much blame him for wanting to be forced into paying women retirees equally with men. His argument, and the one which holds the most water, is that actuarial tables show that women live longer than men, and therefore they will be receiving benefits from the system longer than men retirees. Thus, the unequal payments.

The contradicting argument is that women should not be treated as a class, that one simply cannot assume that because the averages say women live longer than men then each individual woman will live longer than each individual man.

The problem is a complex one, but one I hope is solved before next May, when Mrs. Marguerite Strain, city employee here 28 years, says she plans to retire.

Students at West Texas State University have often wondered aloud whether the university existed for them or they existed for the university.

Dr. Lloyd Watkins, new president of WTSU, put a little perspective on that question last week, according to one student.

The student said he was in the administration building on other business when the new president strode out, invited him into his office, poured him a cup of coffee and talked with him for an hour.

The student was flabbergasted.

Federal agencies play a little public relations game with this country's media and our congressmen and senators.

Here's how it works: A federal agency will approve a grant for some city. Rather than sending a letter to the city involved announcing the grant approval, the agency sends one to the seantor and congressman from the city area.

Then, the congressman and senator get busy whipping out press releases to the city's media that go something like this:

"Senator John Tower announced today that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has approved a ! million grant for (town). . ."

And, then you get a few sterling quotes from the senator.

Truth of the matter is that only rarely does the congressman or senator ever even know that their city has applied for such a grant and only in rare instances have they taken an active role in dealing with an agency in helping to facilitate the grant.

But, they get credit for it, anyway, because most news media go along with the chicanery.

Congressman Bob Price received well-deserved publicity and good will due to his efforts last fall to get a grant for a new Dumas industry.

But, Senator John Tower got some undue and undeserved publicity last week when he was quoted in area media as announcing the $1.1 million loan guarantee for the new Canyon hospital.

Tower had nothing to do with helping Canyon's hospital board obtain the grant, according to board members.

Yet, because the amount was fairly high and the story was sure to make the front pages, Tower took implied credit for the grant in his release.

Then, in typical fashion, his office phoned the release to news media up here on Monday. Thus, the Canyon News, was scooped by two days and the Amarillo paper was given the break.

Bids Sought On New Radios

Bids are currently being sought on more than $1 million worth of communications equipment for law enforcement units in the Panhandle, including Randall County sheriff's office and the City of Canyon police department.

Police Chief Al Stewart said a grant of about $800,000 has been received by the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission for financing a portion of the new equipment for the 25-county area.

He said the funding is to be on a basis with the grant providing about 75 per cent of the costs and local governmental entities providing the remainder.

Bids are to be opened in 90 days and the equipment is expected to be installed within six months after contracts are let.

The funds are to be used primarily for new radio equipment for law enforcement agencies.

Stewart said the local police department is using equipment which was suitable 30 years ago but which is outdated and outmoded today.

Under the plan funded, the local sheriff's office and police department would receive new equipment.

Each agency, Stewart said, will receive a new high frequency for broadcasting, a frequency which will cut out current problems with communications traffic.

In addition, the equipment will provide an inter-agency frequency for communication with other agencies.

For the city, the grant will provide new car radios, portable walkie-talkies and a sending and receiving unit which will give the police department the capability of dispatching its own officers.

Currently, the city contracts with the county for dispatcher services.

The county sheriff's office would also receive new dispatching equipment and radios.

Food Prices To Be Eyed

Canyon School Board members will take another look at prices for cafeteria food for the fall term and will discuss what to do about contracting for gasoline for school vehicles during their regular meeting Tuesday night.

The board meets at 8:30 p.m. at the high school.

Food prices bid last month for the cafeterias were sky-high in the eyes of board members.

The board received no bids for gasoline and Supt. Jerry Jacobs said last month the matter will demand discussion to determine how to obtain gasoline for the school's buses and vehicles.

Board members are expected to set a date to accept bids for construction of a new vocational building on the high school campus.

The board must award a contract by the last of this month to meet stipulations for partial state funding for the school construction.

Members are also expected to take a look at an amended budget for next year's school district operations.

Also on the agenda is discussion of construction of tennis courts on the high school campus.

Institute Continues On Campus

Highlighting the second week of a three-week Juvenile Judges Institute on the West Texas State University campus will be Dr. Paul Bramwell, California psychiatrist and expert in the sex and violent offender.

Dr. Bramwell is expected to lecture several times this week beginning Monday and continuing through Friday.

Nineteen judges and a juvenile probation officer from throughout the state have come to Canyon for the institute which is hosted by WTSU and sponsored by the Texas Center for the Judiciary.

Dr. Brent Lynch, WTSU government professor, is director of the institute.

Umpire's Wife May Be A Little Funny

By CAROL YOUNG

Now that softball and baseball regular seasons are over and everyone has cooled off, I would like to say a few kind words about the umpire — Boo Boo — from the viewpoint of being his wife.

Contrary to popular opinion the umpire is not blind, dumb, stupid a ?#$%¢&* or a ¼+-)(!#$%¢. To be an umpire sanctioned by an association, a man has to attend many meetings every year and a school for umpiring before the season starts. If he can't cut it, he doesn't get the assignments. It's that simple.

Most people start in on the umpire before the game even starts, perhaps they are warming up for the real thing. It is an American tradition to argue with, call names and generally degrade the umpire. That's alright in the major leagues and any game that you have to pay to watch, but the free community games are a different story. The big league umpires make many times more than the man who calls city softball or Little League. Career umpires accept the harassment as part of the job. But the poor guy who gets the brunt of the frustrations of the everyday housewife and worker doesn't even have the money to soothe him.

Stop and think what it would be like if there were no umpires. A ballgame would never be finished.

My main problem is that my husband likes me to accompany him when he umpires. A friendly face in the crowd can be a help in difficult times. However, I get so upset hearing the "fans" badmouth my husband that I come close to having an ulcer attack.

How do you explain to a four-year-old daughter that some people don't like her father one bit. Also, what do you do when she comes walking up and says, "Mama, that man said that Pappa was a dirty" First you have to tell her that if she ever says that again, you'll wash her mouth out with soap and water. Second, you stutter a lot.

Not being one to pass up a good comeback, I put a guy in his place one night. He was spouting the usual fountain of garbage at the umpire and I got tired of it. My daughter was with me, so I calmly turned around, smiled and said, "I'd appreciate it if you would refrain from speaking about her father in that manner." The chin hit the chest and a flush spread over his face. The next time I looked, he was long gone.

I suppose some people believe that umpires crawl out from under a rock fifteen minutes before game time. Not so. Many of them have wives and children. Ah, the light shines. The wives have gotten tired of laundering their children's language and listening to the insults so they don't come any more.

Having nothing else to do except get sick, I have made a weird sort of hobby out of watching people at games. A lot of people do a Dr. Jekyll - Mr. Hyde routine. They are polite and normal people before and after the game. It's during the game that the change comes. Men turn to a dialogue from the trash pile and women scream like fish-wives. Then there is the "expert" who insists on shouting his ignorance to the world. He argues every call regardless whether or not he can even see it and most of all even if he doesn't know the ruling. The umpire is wrong and he is right. Then there is the Little League parent who is going to make sure Johnny doesn't get cheated by the umpire, who is, of course, out to get their kid. The kid couldn't hit the ball with a tree, let alone enjoy playing. He's out there because old dad wants him to be a man.

An umpire's wife has to have a sense of humor, or go nuts. I usually go nuts, even though I have a sense of humor, I think. Going nuts is more fun. I like to argue with the "experts." Not face to face you understand, that is a no no. A wife is not supposed to say a word. So, I sit with my back to them and ask loudly, "Since when are you an expert" or "Read the rules before you make a fool of yourself." This rarely does any good, but it makes me feel better.

Anyhow, the point I'm trying to make is that the umpire is human. His wife may be a little funny, but he's alright. His wife is the one who is sitting there chewing Tums and the plastic filters on her cigarettes.

Any similarities to, or observations made, about people in this article are not meant to be insulting, it's only coincidental.

Booths Gone Zones Stay

The West Texas State University campus is still closed as far as parking is concerned, but policemen will not man booths at each entrance to the main campus this fall as they have in the past.

The booths, in fact, have been moved and only one, a brick structure, remains at the main campus entrance off 23rd Street.

Campus Police Chief Jim Passons said parking spaces in various zones will still be sold next fall to students and faculty, but they will not be required to come onto campus through specific gates.

The remaining brick booth will be used as an information desk for visitors.

Campus police will regulate parking by issuing permits and citations for those parked in improper zones.

Prices for on-campus parking remain unchanged for the fall — $17.50 per year for reserved faculty spaces, $10 for commuting students and $7.50 for students living in dormitories.

No fee is charged night students.

County Still Eyes Waste Problems

Randall County commissioners have not abandoned their efforts to determine how to regulate the drilling of bore-hole waste disposal systems in the county, according to County Judge Woody Pond.

Pond said commissioners believe more study needs to be accomplished on the bore hole problem in the county before proceeding to regulate their digging.

Commissioners held two meetings concerning the bore hole problem with area drillers and representatives of the local health department, the Texas Water Quality Board and others weeks ago.

Discussion of the problem since that time has not been made.

Well, howdy once again to all of the fine folks who just a short year or so ago read this column. Also a quick hello to one four year old who enjoys looking at the pictures.

We are back this year with a slightly changed format and a new column illustration created by Mike McCullough. Mike assures us that this fellow has a resemblance to this column's creator, but we are unable to see this — especially that little pot crowding over the belt. Once again we will try to shine a small spotlite on interesting individuals connected with the vast agricultural industry in our community.

Some new additions will be an agricultural calendar of current events, latest developments in research and technology, 4-H and FFA news, market reports, and a few sprinklings of unpredictable predictions and western humor.

The annual Texas Angus Association field day was held recently at the Richmond Hales farm south of Canyon. Large crowds representing several states attended the meeting. Highlights of the agenda were the judging contest, weight guessing, and several interesting discussions. One of the most interesting discussions, presented by Jim McManigal, dealt with feeder calf evaluation and grading.

That new barn of Richmond's sure proved to be a popular place for the crowd to gather and visit over a good West Texas barbecue dinner. As one official put it "... you just don't realize how much junk you have around the place until you start to get ready to host one of these field days."

The Hales family had put a lot of effort into preparing for the event and the farm looked fantastic.

This weekend two Randall County 4-H Club members are participating in the Texas State 4-H Horse Show being held in Odessa. Miss Martha Johnson and Miss Janet Robinson will be competing with other 4-H Club members from throughout the state in halter, reining, western pleasure, and English riding events. These young ladies have worked hard to qualify to enter this state event. Only 260 club members qualify from the thousands of members with equine projects.

Martha is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vern Johnson, north of the city, and Janet is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Robinson, who reside east of the city. We will try to have more details next week on their accomplishments at the state meet.

Give your garden a new dimension with a small pool.

"Water in the landscape provides a psychological feeling of coolness and tranquility," points out Dr. William Welch, landscape horticulturist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "Aquatic plants and colorful fish add further interest and small recirculating pumps and jets can be installed to add the pleasant sound of splashing water."

When planning a pool for your garden area, be sure that it conforms to the overall design of the garden. Use construction materials that will blend naturally with the landscape and do not become dominant visual elements themselves, suggests the Texas A&M University specialist.

Fish can usually be left in the pool the year round in some parts of the state. They help keep the water clean and relatively free of insects. Pools having a good balance of fish, plants, and water may never have to be drained or cleaned.

That just about brings it to an end for this week. If you have any bit of news related to this column or any event to be placed on our calendar just call us here at the Canyon News office. That toll free number to Canyon area residents is 655-7121.

Hunsley Hills Queen For 1973 Crowned

Danielle Byrd, age 11, was crowned Miss Hunsley Hills 1973 in the 2nd annual pageant held Aug. 1, in Hunsley Hills. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Johny Byrd, 3 Bramblewood Lane.

1st runner up was Katie Lewis, 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon C. Lewis, 9 Southridge Dr. Miss Congeniality was Lisa Burkett, 8, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Burkett, 716 Taylor Lane. Miss Hunsley Hills 1972 was Abby White, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. White, 11 Hunsley Hills Blvd. Pageant sponsor was Michael Tenorio, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Tenorio, 15 Country Club Drive.

For winning the pageant, Danielle won a miniature green glass bottle, and an egg-shaped candle with a coddler holder.

The pageant was started for fun and something to do in the summer months.

Included in the pageant were talent, bathing suit and evening gown competition. For her talent selection, Danielle did a comedy sketch called "Betty, the Clumsy Ballerina."

The questions asked in the pageant were as follows with Danielle's answers:

1. If your aunt left you a million dollars, what would you do with it? I'd donate it to a hospital.

2. If you were at a restaurant with your boyfriend and he ordered something special as a surprise, and you were allergic to it, what would you do? Tell him I would save it and eat it later.

3. You break your arm the day before you are to leave on a ski trip with your boyfriend and his parents. This is the only free weekend he will have for a year. What would you do? Go ahead and go and forget it ever happened — but not ski.

4. What would you do if you were going to model and your brother hit you in the nose with a football and it swelled up? Go ahead and model anyway.

The judges were Michael Tenorio, Jayne Lewis, 11, Katie's sister, and Abby White. To test the contestants, the judges separately told them they had lost and done badly. Then they asked them how they felt about the others winning. This was to get reactions that were favorable concerning their sportsmanship.

The deciding question for the winner was — What would you do if you were on a big boat and it was capsized by a tidal wave? Danielle answered that she'd find a life preserver.

The contestants were entertained at a luncheon given by Abby White.

Danielle will be taken out by the pageant members and officials to a pizza party in the future.

When asked if she would enter the Little Miss Canyon Pageant, Danielle said that she would, and might also enter larger pageants when she's older. Her answer when asked about the Women's Lib movement, was that whe thought they were making too much of it, but that she did think that women should receive the same pay as a man for the same job. As far as Watergate is concerned, Danielle thinks it's "Terrible, I want to watch the regular shows. They say weird words that you can't understand."

Michael Tenorio's view of Women's Lib was that it had been taken too far, but agreed with Danielle about wages. He'd rather that girls be girls.

After crowning Danielle, Michael shook hands with her.

Nationally-Known Educators To Speak At Meet

Two noted American educators will tell how reading plays a vital role in their fields in keynote lectures to be presented at the 21st annual Texas Association for the Improvement of Reading Conference, slated Tuesday and Wednesday on the West Texas State University campus.

Dr. William Kottmeyer, former superintendent of St. Louis public schools, now a writer-consultant for McGraw Hill Publishing, and Dr. Robert R. Galvan, chief academic officer of Our Lady of the Lake College and recognized expert on bilingual and cross-cultural education.

Dr. Kottmeyer will present two lectures Tuesday on "Aspects of Connubial Compatibility in Reading and Spelling" and "Decoding and Meaning: A Modest Proposal."

Dr. Galvan will present lectures Wednesday on "Does Your Child Enjoy Reading?" and "Diagnosis, The Right Step Forward."

Dr. Kottmeyer has been responsible for initiating work-study programs, corridor libraries and the use of data processing, decentralization of instructional administration and the expansion of vocational training to all high school students through busing. His endeavors also include a vocabulary building project for the culturally deprived, and the formation of a parent conference to provide greater participation at the local level.

Recently appointed Director of the Regional Center of the National Right to Read program, Dr. Galvan holds a B.S. degree in chemistry and physics, an M.S. in psychology and sociology, and a Ph.D. in educational psychology.

In addition to his duties as chief academic officer of Our Lady of the Lake College, Dr. Galvan is also in charge of all of the school's graduate and undergraduate programs.

Dr. Galvan has worked as a research chemist, a national visiting lecturer in the field of reading-communications, and a consultant in early childhood education, reading special education and bilingual education. He has also pioneered many programs associated with ethnic and minority groups.

General sessions of the workshop begin at 8:45 a.m. Dr. Lloyd I. Watkins, WTSU's new president, will present a welcoming address to participants. Sectional meetings concentrating on the value of reading in the various disciplines, will be conducted beginning at 11 a.m.

On Tuesday evening, participants will view "TEXAS."

Mr. Renner, an employee of the Texas Highway Department here, died Tuesday at the Northwest Texas Hospital psychiatric pavillion at Amarillo.

He was a native of Friona and was born Dec. 28, 1933. He was a member of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. He resided in Canyon with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Renner of 1105 First Ave.

Ninth graders will need a blue T-shirt and blue shorts.

The new uniforms can be purchased from the local merchants.

Girls' uniforms will be the same as last year.

Local Cadet Takes Honors

Cadet Michael Cannon, son of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Cannon Jr. of 1208 Creekmere, has been named a distinguished cadet at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

Cannon, who will enter his junior year at the academy this fall, placed in the upper five per cent of his class.

The cadet is currently at home on 30-day furlough after graduating from Airborne School at Fort Benning, Ga. He also served as a "third" lieutenant with the Berlin Brigade in Germany for five weeks.

At the completion of his four years at West Point, Cannon will receive a BS degree in engineering and a commission in the Army as a second lieutenant.

Three To Attend Lab

THREE RANDALL COUNTY 4-H'ers will attend the 1973 District I Teen Leader Laboratory to be conducted at TSTI Campus on August 14, 15, and 16.

The objective of the laboratory will be to teach boys and girls to work in group situations, considering other people, their abilities and limitations. A staff of approximately 12 older youth will be conducting the entire laboratory.

The 4-H'ers planning to attend are Gary Reynolds, Cleta 4-H Club, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Reynolds; Shawn Hall, Jowell 4-H Club, son of Mr. and Mrs. Winston Hall; and Curry Clifford, Paramount 4-H Club, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Clifford, II.

A NEW VOLUNTEER leader for the High Plains 4-H Club is Roger Jones. Roger, who is from Dimmitt, will be helping the club members with a horse project. Kaylene Roby and Sandi Nelson will be the first to start working with horses. Others from the club will start at a later date. Roger and his wife, Sherri, live at the Siesta Mobile Home Park.

* * *

THE LAST SESSION of the electric project will be Wednesday, August 8, at 10:00 a.m. in the Reddi Room of Southwestern Public Service Company. Twenty boys and girls have participated in the project.

Tax . . .

Texas voters last November.

Under the ordinance prepared, the exemption will become effective Jan. 1, 1974.

Local residents desiring the exemption must apply for the exemption with the city tax office.

Commissioners have indicated they will pass the ordinance. They were asked at a recent meeting to grant an exemption of $5000, but turned down the request.

County commissioners have also indicated they will view favorably the granting of a $3000 exemption for county residents, but have not yet taken action.

Members of the Canyon School Board have briefly discussed the exemption twice and once with city commissioners. They have indicated they are not interested currently in granting the exemption.

City commissioners Monday night are also expected to continue discussions of the master plan designed by HD&R, Dallas architectural and engineering firm, for a new city office building.

Representatives of the firm presented a master plan to commissioners last month and sponsored a two-day trip to cities in three states last weekend for commissioners to view similar complexes.

The master plan concept calls for location of all city functions — law enforcement, administration, fire, library — under one roof, with a separate civic center.

The complex is to be located on the lot now occupied by the community center and the city hall annex.

Commissioners are also expected to consider approval of several plats for sections of the Hunsley Hills addition. Consideration is also expected for a petition to close a road in the city's Bomar addition and for appointment of representatives to the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

Locals . . .

tivity as the cities voiced their support of the plan to Montoya.

Local Chamber of Commerce Manager Roland Black said he has received no word since that time on the status of the federal highway legislation which officials hope will fund a study of the feasibility of redesignating U.S. 60.

Chamber vice president David West said he likewise has heard nothing from the New Mexico officials who were the prime movers in the project.

He said he wrote letters not long after the February meeting in Roswell asking Montoya and U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen to include Canyon in a listing of cities to be serviced by the interstate highway.

Both senators, he said, replied that they would have Canyon included in the bill.

He said he understands that funding is being requested for a study with later funding to come if the project proves feasible.

Leroy Tillery of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce said he believes the bill is in conference committee following passage in different forms by the House and Senate.

Montoya is currently occupied in the so-called Watergate hearings.

Wheat . . .

price is currently holding around $3 per bushel.

"The size and value of the 1973 crop and the economic impact on the local economy can be quickly realized when compared with the 1972 wheat crop of 1.5 million bushels and a value of $1.30 per bushel," Brazzil said.

If all the factors play together as they did in 1973, the 1974 wheat crop could prove to be a competitor for this year at harvest time.

Federal officials announced last week there will be no set-aside required for farmers in 1974, thus again throwing open acreages for planting.

Weather and price, however, remain as unpredictable as ever.

Suit . . .

file suit, too," she said. "I think it would apply to all of them (retirement systems in the state)."

She said similar suits have been filed in several other states in order to resolve the question of whether the actuarial tables used to determine retirement benefits are legal under various federal laws.

Federal regulations, however, apparently conflict on the status of retirement systems. EEOC guidelines prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex in benefits through retirement systems. But, guidelines used by the federal Department of Labor have no such restriction, according to the vice chairman of the EEOC.

Mrs. Hershey said she doubts the TCLU will win its suit against the state.

"All acturial tables do show that women do live longer than men," she said. "The lawyers seem to think we won't win it, but we're hoping."

The TMRS, like most other retirement systems, bases benefit payments on tables which give the life expectancy of men and women.

Since the tables say women live longer than men, benefit payments are reduced to women by about 5 per cent.

Mrs. Strain has said that she must work five years longer than a man to receive equal benefits upon retirement through the TMRS.

Dams . . .

was recorded in 1941, 1951, 1960 and 1968.

The report says that one dam placed just above Canyon would detain runoff from 11 square miles of the flood plain area. "This would not necessarily provide an adequate level of flood damage reduction," the report says. It says the single dam location is the only location on the creek where flood control structures could feasibly be built.

The area subject to flooding from Palo Duro Creek is 1400 acres, the report says.

It cites one retarding factor already prevalent on the creek — Bivins Lake — but says the lake would not act as a detainer for water for a great length of time.

She wore a matching Camelot coif of Alencon lace beaded to match her gown, also made by her mother. A veil of sheer illusion fell to fingertip length. The bride wore a lavaliere which had been worn by her grandmother, Mrs. Leddie Konvicka, in her wedding.

After the wedding, a reception was held at the Amarillo Federated Women's Club in the covered patio area where natural greenery and a fountain were the decorations. The bride's mother and sister made the three tiered wedding cake that was served with punch and other finger foods.

The couple will be at home after August 11, at 112 East 28th, Amarillo, following a wedding trip to Colorado.

The bride attended Amarillo College and West Texas State University and is presently employed by Air Speed Oil Co. At Amarillo College she was a member of Kappa Delta Chi.

The bridegroom has attended West Texas State University and the University of Kansas at Lawrence, where he was on the Dean's Honor List. He is presently employed by the City of Amarillo.

After residing in Amarillo for a time, both plan to complete their education at the University of Kansas at Lawrence.

Dates To Be Set Monday For Various Fall Events

Board members of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce face a busy schedule when they meet in regular session Monday night at the community center here.

Meeting time is 7:30 p.m.

Chamber Manager Roland Black said the board is expected to establish dates for a Chamber-sponsored businessman-new faculty dinner, a Little 500 bicycle race and a membership breakfast.

The Chamber annually sponsors a dinner for new faculty members from West Texas State University and Canyon school system to become acquainted with local businessmen.

The dinner is usually held on the WTSU campus with businessmen sponsoring new faculty guests.

Last year was the first year for a Little 500 bicycle race around the Canyon courthouse square. The race was held in late August and is expected to be held later this month.

Scores of riders entered the Little 500 last summer for short and long-distance racing climaxed by a 50-mile relay around the square.

A bicycle rodeo, for younger riders to have their bikes inspected for safety and their own prowess tested, is scheduled to be concurrent with the Little 500.

The Chamber has sponsored two membership breakfasts in recent months and plan another during the fall to highlight WTSU and CHS sports.

Board members are also expected to discuss final plans for a watermelon feed for WTSU football players and local fans scheduled for Aug. 25 in Conner Park.

Also to be discussed is establishment of a Keith Jackson Scholarship for a woman athlete at WTSU. Jackson, sportscaster for a major television network, donated half of his speaking fee for appearing at the Canyon Chamber banquet last winter, toward the scholarship fund.

A financial report on the Canyon Days Celebration will also be discussed as will a luncheon scheduled Aug. 20 to welcome Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd I. Watkins to the city. Dr. Watkins is new president of WTSU.

No Word On Hospital

Architect Bill O'Connell was in town Friday but all he brought with him were more drawings of a 50-bed hospital to be constructed here.

Local South Randall County Hospital District board members had hoped he'd bring final word from the state health department that the construction project is approved.

O'Connell, who has designed the new $1.6 million hospital, said he has not even received official word that a guaranteed $1.1 million Hill-Burton loan has been approved.

Nor has Administrator Ray Grimes.

Grimes said he was informed of the approval of the Hill-Burton guarantee last week by a representative in Sen. John Tower's office.

But, he said he has received no official notification from the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

It is the official word from HEW and the state health department which keeps local hospital board members from seeking bids for construction of the new hospital, a replacement for Neblett Memorial Hospital.

O'Connell said Friday he hopes to have final okay from the health department early this week.

Grimes said as soon as approval is given hospital board members will meet to give final approval to the architect's plans and seek bids.

Construction prices are currently stabilized under President Nixon's Phase 4 guidelines, but local officials fear prices will zoom up when the freeze is lifted.

They have already been told by O'Connell that $1.6 million may be less than that needed for hospital construction.

Board members have not yet decided how to finance half of that figure. A total of $800,000 has been financed already through tax bonds. Consideration is now being given to either the Hill-Burton guaranteed loan or to issuance of revenue bonds.

Cowboy Smiley will hold an All-Kids Roundup August 7-10.

Cowboy Smiley To Hold All-Kids Roundup Here

Cowboy Smiley, champion to thousands of children, will stage an All-Kids Roundup in Canyon. Programs get underway Tuesday, August 7 and continue through Friday, Aug. 10.

Smiley has appeared in over 700 cities and has held nearly 300 Roundups from coast to coast and in Canada. He has also been a youth evangelist and conducted family crusades since he was 17 years old.

Including the Rockets to Heaven race, Smiley will have some excellent features for the children of the community. The Happy Music Time by Mrs. Smiley and The Favorite Films are some of these features. Added to these are Smiley's jumbo jigsaw pictures using brilliant lighting with a western ranch setting across the stage. His talented wife also gives the exciting illustrated stories each night.

All boys and girls attending the big Tuesday night Roundup at 7:30 p.m. will receive the American flag pin for coming. He will also have treats, story papers and balloons the other nights. The boys and girls who bring their pals, ages 5 to 14, will be made deputies and cowboys and will receive the official kerchief and star badge. He will reward his deputies with a smart western hat for bringing more friends, and the top rider will be crowned on Friday night for bringing the most visitors!

Parents are also welcome and must accompany all Pre-Schoolers. Admission is free for all and the rallies are in the spacious A.C. Auditorium of the Assembly of God Church at 2318 13th Ave. Smiley has nonsectarian programs, and they came from 88 churches for his Fort Wayne roundup.

The Smileys will bring music and messages on Sunday, Aug. 5 at 11 a.m. and will have an evening "under the stars" at 7 p.m. on Monday night, Aug. 6. At 7:30 p.m. there will be a program at the Assembly of God Church. Smiley will also show a Billy Graham motion picture, and will have special music by singers.

All the public is invited.

Burning Fields Against Law

The regional supervisor of the Texas Air Control Board warned area farmers this week it is a violation of the state law to burn grain stubble in fields.

Vick Newsom said the Texas Clean Air Act prohibits burn off of grain fields.

"There are cases where an exception can be made for unusual circumstances or emergencies," he said. Examples are infestations of some type. . . ."

Newsom said persons who feel they have grounds for exceptions should contact the regional office, Texas Air Pollution Control Services, 1906 Fourth St., Lubbock, Tex, 79415.

Big Brothers Needed For Boys

Directors of the Canyon Big Brothers sent out an urgent plea last week for local men who are willing to volunteer to be big brothers for city youngsters.

President Jim Ashford said a waiting list of about four boys has been compiled — waiting for local men to volunteer to be their big brothers.

Those interested in becoming big brothers should contact Clark Wooldridge at 656-2327 or 355-7992.

Reading ConferenceTo Open Monday Opens New Worlds Of Learning, Enjoyment

Mrs. Hazel Sunderman

TAIR is a legitimate Texas brag.

So says Mrs. Hazel Sunderman, Canyon Junior High School librarian and a 1973 officer of the Texas Association for the Improvement of Reading. Mrs. Sunderman will be one of the featured area speakers this week when the Association convenes its 21st annual reading conference Tuesday and Wednesday on the West Texas State University campus.

Presiding over the two-day meet will be Mrs. Mildred Ardis, president of TAIR and Intermediate Language Arts Coordinator in the Austin Independent School District.

Keynote speakers for the workshop will be Dr. William Kottsmeyer, former superintendent of the St. Louis public schools, and now a writer-consultant for McGraw-Hill Publishing, and Dr. Robert R. Galvan, chief academic officer at Our Lady of the Lake College and recognized authority in the field of bilingual and cross-cultural education.

General sessions of the conference begin each day at 8:45 a.m. in the Activities Center on campus. The agenda will include presentations by area teachers on new trends in reading, literature, mathematics, science, social studies, disabled children, spelling and kindergarten. On Wednesday, TAIR will be honoring all school administrators at a luncheon.

An inveterate reader herself — one of those kind that consumes everything from the classics to ingredients lists on pop bottles — Mrs. Sunderman, a former English, speech and special education teacher, embodies one of TAIR's principal tenets — that every teacher, regardless of his assigned teaching station "is and must be a teacher of reading."

This philosophy is revealed in the scheduled lectures for the upcoming conference, which include discussions of how reading plays a vital role in such fields as science, mathematics, social studies and education for the learning disabled child.

Beginning her teaching career in 1937 as an English and speech teacher in Estelline, Mrs. Sunderman said she previously had no former training in the techniques of teaching children how to read.

She herself was taught to read in the West Texas State College training school. The exhilarating atmosphere of an experimental school for elementary students, she says, may have engendered her life-long love of reading.

In 1947, at a time when Texas had only three certified special education teachers, Mrs. Sunderman took charge of a class of youngsters who heretofore had been regarded as too deviant from the norm to be considered public school material.

With no formal background in teaching such children, Mrs. Sunderman began groping for ways to teach her unique class, realizing that the success or failure of her efforts could spell the fate for the infant program in her school as well as in the entire region.

"My classroom looked like Grand Central Station, with everyone coming in to watch and evaluate the program," she remembered. "My teaching technique was simple. I tried one thing, and if it didn't work I tried something else that did."

Reading was an integral part of her class. With no textbooks available for use, Mrs. Sunderman wrote all of the class' reading material herself.

"I found they responded best when I wrote things about them," she said. "I wrote about their families, as well as things they had to know, really, to survive — like their names, their addresses, what to do if they got lost, their telephone numbers and how much change they should receive for giving a dime to buy a five-cent coke."

One of Mrs. Sunderman's fondest reading success stories during these years was one about a mongoloid child, Mary Jo, whom the librarian recalls as one of the students who became an exceptionally good reader.

"One of the principal things I had to do in this class was to raise these youngsters' self-concepts. I did this by capitalizing on the thing they did best. Mary Jo was an unusually good reader. She had the proper intonation and was a good speller. Comprehension was another thing, but it sounded great. Every time we had a visitor in the class, I'd send Mary Jo up to the front of the class to read. She was, after all, good public relations for our new program.

"But after being in the limelight for a while, Mary Jo got to be something of a ham. Once after one of her presentations, a visitor complimented her on her reading. Mary Jo smiled and said 'yes, I do read very well, but I don't know that two and two makes four."

That Mary Jo's reading ability was no mean accomplishment is revealed by the fact that although almost everybody would be able to solve the rudimentary addition problem, a recent poll commissioned by the National Reading Council, showed that 18 million adults over age 16 are unable to read with understanding 10 per cent of the questions on such standard forms as applications for drivers' licenses and personal bank loans, according to Mrs. Sunderman.

As a teacher who acquired her "expert" designation in reading through classroom experience and TAIR conference attendance instead of formal training, Mrs. Sunderman has created her own repository of "quotable quotes" about why people should read, how people should read and what people should read. At CJHS, her counsel about such things is sought by both students and teachers alike.

To parents, Mrs. Sunderman warns, "if you don't, they won't." Read, that is.

To all who lend her an ear, she promotes reading with almost missionary zeal, advising everyone to become 'lifetime readers.' She makes the frank admission that, in her case, reading is sometimes a ploy she uses "to keep from doing anything else."

As a librarian, she makes it a daily habit to take two books off her shelves to take home and read each evening. Estimating that over her summer "vacation" she has read about 30 new CJHS library books, she says reading the literature of the young is one of the best ways to find out what the kids are all about.

To the students, she prescribes what she calls the Four C's reading diet, which consists of liberal sprinklings of current reading (TV Guide, Sports Illustrated, Time, etc.), contemporary reading (recent authors like Hemingway and Pearl S. Buck), classics-reading ("but if they get too hard to read toward the middle, just stop reading if doing it on your own, she tells the students), and the catch-all "choice" reading, which includes all those gothic romances, horse stories and sports tales that junior high schoolers have insatiable tastes for. Her ultimate goal, she says, is to make students recognize authors' names as well as those of well-known rock music groups.

"The current reading is a must — that's what conversation is made of. Contemporary reading gives us a reflection of our own times; classics a proper sense of our heritage. Choice reading I prescribe to the saturation point. Romance, usually, for the girls. Sports for the boys — but every once in a while I can get sneaky with the boys and get them to read a book of the romance variety. By getting rid of the sissy stigma on such books, or putting it into a dare — 'are you brave enough to carry this book around'?"

Mrs. Sunderman has found that students coming into junior high school now seem to have more advanced reading training than those in the past. She illustrates this fact by pointing out that the Walter Farley horse stories that entranced seventh graders six years ago have already been read, for the most part, by entering seventh grade students today. The more sophisticated Tex Maule sports books, once taken off the shelves by ninth graders, are now having their intricate strategies unravelled by seventh graders.

Books, contrary to any modern theories, are not going out in the wake of a vast tidal wave of mass media entertainment, Mrs. Sunderman declared emphatically. They offer something television can't give, she says.

"When I watch television, I find myself bombarded with ads, propaganda and viewpoints. There's no time to evaluate. Like Watergate. I listen to one articulate speaker and nod in agreement, only to do the same for the equally articulate opposing speaker. It's all so quick, and then it's gone, and I'm left wondering 'what did he say?'

"Reading's not like that. It's the best programmed instruction there is. And with TV, you can miss a show that you want to see, while you don't have that problem with a book. It's always there."

Mrs. Sunderman is much preoccupied with the problem of what increasingly affluent Americans are going to do with their leisure time. "We've been taught to work together, now we have to learn to play together," she says.

"But we're finding that all this leisure time seems to result in more traffic accidents and more money-spending. Reading, however, is the cheapest form of entertainment, and the least dangerous — I can't remember anyone having broken a leg from reading a book."

Making up for Mrs. Sunderman's lack of a formal reading education background, she says, is her attendance for many years at TAIR conferences where she says she "hears it from the best." Her involvement paid off handsomely, too, since this year she's the only Texas woman educator whose name appears in Who's Who in America.

TAIR, she said, holds 12 conferences annually in cooperation with various colleges and universities. In this area, Dr. Hellon Wilbur, associate professor of education, is college representative, having taken over duties from Dr. Ruth Lowes, retired WT professor of education who had coordinated the area conferences since the first in 1953. Mrs. Nadene Lyles, social studies teacher at CJHS, is present area vice president.

TAIR, according to Mrs. Sunderman, is "the envy of the other states" and the model upon which the International Reading Association was based.

One of the popular highlights of the conference is the exhibit of books and other teaching materials, which will be on display from 8:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. Monday and from 8 a.m. until noon Aug. 8.

The conference is open to all interested parents, teachers, administrators, and college students. Persons may register for one or both days' sessions at 7:30 a.m. each day in Room 101 of the WT Activities Center.

Camp For Elderly People To Be Held

Are you older and alone? Do you need some new interests and friendship? The Creative Years Camp, sponsored by the United Methodist Church, for people of all faiths, may be the answer for you.

At the camp, older and often disabled people find new and refreshing ideas. Crafts and hobbies are a big activity at the camp.

Mrs. Tom Collins of Canyon, who has been to the camp herself, said that the most important thing to her is the fellowship. Older people sometimes feel that the world is passing them by and they are alone. At the camp they discuss their problems and feelings and find out that they aren't the only ones who feel that way. It gives many of them a once a year outing that leads to new and lasting friendships.

Those that attend come from a wide area of Texas. The care and supervision at the camp gives the disabled an opportunity to join in the activities.

A trip to see "TEXAS" is usually included in the activities. The campers that come from other areas find this enjoyable and an excellent opportunity to see the play.

Another point that Mrs. Collins stressed is that no activity is mandatory. It's more of a "do your own thing" program.

Some of the crafts studied in the past have been, painting, spool weaving, decoupage, and needlecraft. Most of the crafts are brought by a camper who sometimes instructs the others in the art.

The camp will be held in Ceta Canyon, August 13 - 16. To register for the camp and for more information on it, contact the church office at 655-3540.
